

Inefficient HVAC systems waste significant amounts of energy and money due to poor airflow control. This project aims to design a small-scale smart airflow control system that adjusts automatically to keep comfort levels stable while reducing power use.